Big Boar Rally August 24th -25th Newald

The Newald Fire Department is holding their Big Boar Biker Rally this Friday and Saturday, August 24th and 25th in Newald. Friday features a parade and DJ. Saturday has live music, a bonfire, free corn and bog races.

Everyone is welcome. There is also other food and of course beverages of all kinds. The poker run first place winner will receive $500. Breakfast will be served Saturday and Sunday morning. All proceeds benefit the Newald Fire Department.

Help Wanted for the Forest County Fair

The Forest County Fair is coming soon. September 6th will be entry day the buildings will be open at 3:30 Thursday afternoon so you can place your exhibits. We are asking all exhibitors to send their entry forms in by Friday August 31 so your tags can be printed and ready for you when you arrive on Thursday evening. We will accept entries on the evening of the fair but we will not have a computer on site, so you will be responsible for handwriting your tags and turning them in so they can be entered into the computer for the judges sheet.

Over the past few years, we have relied on donations to send low income children to the fair for one day free of charge. The children were given a wristband, a free meal and also some school supplies. We have also planned free games and other activities for all children to take part in while visiting the fair.

Without the generous donations from businesses and individuals like you, this would not be possible so we ask for your support or continued support to help us continue to offer this program to the children in this county who would not be able to attend the fair if it were not for this help. Saturday of the fair is a day for children when we want as many kids as possible to have a day to have fun and be a kid without placing more stress on families who are having a difficult time financially.

The Rat River Recreational Trail

Finally, after a frustrating two years of waiting, there is great news about the Rat River Recreation Trail. This is an exciting opportunity for Forest County to have its first non-motorized trail with a hard surface for bikers and hikers, similar to the beautiful trails in other counties. The idea began with a vision by a group of bike enthusiasts, Bear Lake residents and the Town of Blackwell for a scenic trail to Bear Lake campground and have the potential to someday in the future extend to Armstrong Creek and Wabeno.

Funding was promised when the Chequamegon Nicolet Recreational Advisory Committee (RAC) approved the project and Blackwell included the project in their town planning, but beginning all depends of Forest Service approval.

The wonderful news now is that the Forest Service has completed a NEAPA (environmental) study, a hydrological study, and archeological study and has now signed, along with the Town of Blackwell, a Challenge Cost Share agreement. All that bureaucratic language means, "It's a go!"

Robby Gordon's Stadium Super Trucks are coming to Crandon's World Championships!

600-hp, 2,800-lb mini stadium off-road race trucks are gonna give 'er a go at Crandon on Labor Day Weekend

Fans attending the Crandon International Off-Road Raceway on Labor Day Weekend are in for an added bonus as the dawn of a new era in short course off-road truck racing will make an exhibition debut during the World Championships, Sept. 1-2. Robby Gordon's Stadium Super Trucks (SST) will be unveiled for the first time east of the Mississippi - at Crandon just adding to the already packed weekend of racing with the Traxxas TORC Series, presented by AMSOIL, in town!

"Crandon is short course off-road racing's elite event. If you have one event all year that you can schedule, be it a driver or race fan, you'd better make it the World Championships at Crandon on Labor Day Weekend," said Gordon. "The weather's great in northern Wisconsin that time of year, the fans are awesome and the best racers in the world are going to show up and run our new Stadium Super Trucks."

Sanctioned by USAC (the same sanctioning body for TORC), Gordon says the 427cu/600-hp, 2,800-pound mini stadium racing trucks are capable of speeds up to 125 mph, while figuring they'll be faster than TORC's PRO Light trucks, and possibly able to put up lap times near what the TORC PRO 2WD trucks can run. "We don't quite know how these tiny little trucks are going to handle Crandon, but everyone involved sure can't wait to get there," he added.

SST will bring six race-ready trucks to Crandon for two all-star races as part of the TORC weekend and will feature Gordon and his business partner Justin Matney. Invitations to TORC drivers Ricky Johnson, Rob MacCachren, Andrew Caddell and Johnny Greaves have been put out to round out the field of drivers.

"Well it just keeps getting more and more interesting at Crandon as the summer winds down and we get closer to the World Championships, doesn't it?," beamed Crandon's Cliff Flannery. "We're thrilled to have Robby and his Stadium Super Trucks select Crandon as the first place outside of California that they've raced. We had a great time hosting the Ultra4 Series buggies at the Brush Run this past June and believe that the diehard fans at Crandon are going to get a big kick out of Robby's little stadium trucks here in a few weeks."

Early Canada goose season open Sept. 1

MADISON –The first fall hunting opportunities – the early Canada goose and mourning dove seasons – are soon here and hunters are expected to find good numbers of both birds. The early Canada goose season in Wisconsin runs Sept. 1-15 statewide. The dove season runs Sept. 1 – Nov. 9 statewide.

"The early season provides wonderful recreational opportunities for our goose hunters and directs harvest pressure toward these locally nesting geese," said Kent Van Horn, DNR migratory game bird ecologist. "With the early spring in 2012 we expect hunters will find good numbers of geese."

During the spring waterfowl survey, Wisconsin's resident breeding goose population estimate was 145,386, with field reports indicating above average production. The early Canada goose season is allowed by federal rules because of the growth of local giant Canada goose populations, Van Horn says. The harvest of Canada geese in the early season now amounts to one-third of the total annual Canada goose harvest in Wisconsin.

To increase their chance of success, hunters will want to remain mobile and watch movement patterns of the geese, Van Horn says. "Wisconsin's resident geese often change feeding and movement patterns this time of year," he says. "Hunters who scout prior to the hunt and stay mobile during the season give themselves the best chance for success."

More early Canada goose season details
 The early season daily bag limit is five birds. In addition to the standard small game hunting license and state and federal waterfowl stamps, participation requires a $3 early Canada goose permit and HIP certification. Registering for HIP, the federal Harvest Information Program, is free and can be done at any DNR Service Center, licensing sales agent or online.

There are no "zones" or "subzones" during the early season. The hunt is statewide regardless of what area hunters may hold a permit for during the regular goose season, Van Horn says. For more information on Canada geese, please go to dnr.wi.gov and search keyword: "waterfowl."

Late Blight Confirmed On Wisconsin Tomatoes

It's doing very well this year, so growers need to continually be aware of the problem. We've now had confirmation of late blight on tomatoes in Adams County, and on potatoes almost everywhere in Wisconsin. Early blight has been particularly rampant in Oneida County this summer, and I've confirmed several cases in just the last two weeks. It's picking up steam and starting to become a major problem. Please reference our previous news releases or the fact sheets on early and late blight for more information. These can be found at hort.uwex.edu/articles/late-blight and hort.uwex.edu/articles/early-blight.

Diets to Avoid

Fad diets are popular because they can produce quick - though temporary - weight loss, but some of them can be hazardous to your health, especially those involving:

Fasting/Detox: These are often starvation diets in disguise, and they can cause headaches, fatigue and stomach upset. If you consume little or no protein, your body starts breaking down muscle, resulting in a higher percentage of body fat. You can also lose electrolytes and risk life-threatening organ damage. This approach is different from the medically supervised liquid or very low-calorie diets sometimes used for severe obesity.

Supplements/Injections: The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has banned supplements containing potentially dangerous ingredients, has not approved HCG (injection or homeopathic) and ADHD medications for weight loss, and has warned against substances such as aconite, bitter orange and country mallow.

High Protein/Low Carb: High-protein, high-fat diets may increase your risk of heart disease and stress your kidneys, leading to kidney failure. Complex carbohydrates (whole grains and produce) promote good health and should only be limited if medically advised.

One "Magic" Ingredient: Lemon juice, cabbage or vinegar aren't magical diet aids. Also, the "grapefruit diet" can be especially harmful for people taking certain medications for depression, hypertension and cholesterol. Avoid methods that severely restrict other foods.

Get the Skinny: Fad diets are often based on the above strategies. If a diet promises results too good to be true, just say "no" and focus on portion control, exercise and a healthy, balanced diet instead.

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF LAONA 2012-2013 SCHOOL YEAR ASBESTOS NOTIFICATION

As a result of recent federal legislation (Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act - AHERA), each primary and secondary school in the nation is required to complete a stringent new inspection for asbestos and to develop a plan of management for all asbestos-containing building materials. The School District of Laona has a goal to be in full compliance with this law and is following the spirit, as well as, the letter of the law. As a matter of policy, the District shall continue to maintain a safe and healthful environment for our community's youth and employees.

In keeping with this legislation, all buildings (including support buildings) owned by the school district were inspected by Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) accredited inspectors and samples were analyzed by an independent laboratory. Based on the inspection, the District prepared and the state approved a comprehensive management plan for handling asbestos safely and responsibly. Furthermore, the School District of Laona has completed its AHERA 3 - year Re-inspection requirement. Federal law required a periodic walk-through (called "Surveillance") every six months. Also, the law requires for all buildings to be re-inspected three years after a management plan is in effect.

The Asbestos Management Plan for the School District of Laona is located in the district administrator's office in the Laona High School. The plan is available for public inspection during regular business hours in the district administrator's office by appointment only, when such appointment is made with David Bardo at least one working day in advance. Any request to view the plan must be honored by the designated person within five (5) working days of the receipt of such a request. Copies of the document are available for 25 cents per page from the district office. Allow five (5) days after written request for compliance.

LAONA SCHOOL DIST. STUDENT RECORDS

Student records are maintained to assist students, parents, guardians and the school in achieving the student's educational goals. Such records are accumulated, maintained, released, transferred and eventually destroyed by the building principal or his/her designee in accordance with state and federal law. Only those individuals or agencies specifically authorized by state and federal law shall be granted access to a student's records.

The school district does forward records to other schools that have requested the records and in which the student seeks or intends to enroll, or is already enrolled, as long as the disclosure is for purposes related to the student's enrollment or transfer.

An adult student or the parent/guardian of a minor student may inspect the student's records in accordance with administrative policy and established procedures and may challenge the content if he/she believes the records are inaccurate or misleading. Such a complaint would be filed with the building principal. ## Joyce Marshall Student Area open at Crandon

Mr. Krauses's Krew: Race Stamper, Andrew Lehman, Jarod Roberts, Noah Bauknecht, Tommy Olson, Zoe Bohac, Julia Cline, Kyle Wagoner, McKenzie Flannery, and Trevor Tupper

The Crandon School District is now the proud owner of an outside student rest/study area, thanks to the donation of money from the family of the late Joyce Marshall.

The family representatives, Jane Gruett and Alice Lundin, talked with pride about the life of Joyce Marshall, a former teacher. They wished to have Joyce's love of children and the teaching profession immortalized into something that students could use for generations to come. Brainstorming between Jamie Conway, owner of Conway True Value in Crandon, and Crandon School District art instructor Mark Mackowski, came up with a plan to have a shaded courtyard area for student to congregate, study, hold class and just relax.

The project took about a year and a half to complete, with added donations from the Crandon Teacher Association, Sandy Plummer, Willy Krause and Jamie Conway. The Crandon School District purchased a plaque, created by Forest Granite Works, to commemorate the location.

The majority of the labor was supplied by Mr. Krause's middle school home and auto class. The students showed a lot of pride in what they feel is now their area to use. Their initials will be put in concrete at the site. With the opening of the school grounds after hours, the public is also welcome to enjoy the site.

Updated info on new wetland, waterway law changes

MADISON – Updated information about recent waterway and wetland law changes, along with new permit application materials, are now available online on the Department of Natural Resources website, according to state natural resource officials.

Law changes affecting regulations for navigable waterways passed by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Scott Walker earlier this year went into effect Aug. 1. Some of the key changes include grandfathering for pre-existing piers, modified standards for new piers [PDF] an exemption for some grading projects, changes to certain boathouse repair and maintenance limitations, and modified procedures for all waterway general permits and individual permits. Technology improvements like electronic public notices and electronic permit tracking were also included in the legislation, according to Liesa Lehmann, waterway and wetland section chief

A new online water permit system is now available for some DNR water permits, with additional permits to be phased in over the next year. Applicants for waterway and wetland individual permits can now fill out their applications online, pay application fees online, and track the progress of their application online.

More information can be found by searching the DNR's website for "waterways."

Under a new state law, piers newly constructed after April 2012 must meet size limits to avoid needing a permit.

Wetland regulations also were recently changed by updated laws that went into effect July 1. These changes include a new authority for DNR to create general permits for smaller projects, new processes for wetland individual permits, and a new requirement for wetland mitigation to offset the impacts of permitted wetland fill. DNR is in the process of creating two new wetland related general permits, and is planning on creating more.

More information on wetland regulatory programs can be found on the DNR website.

Permit fees also were modified with the law change, Lehmann says. Lawmakers increased permit fees to more accurately reflect the agency costs to administer environmental regulations, and removed a single-highest fee provision so that each activity that requires a permit is charged a fee. Information explaining the new fees [PDF] is available on the DNR website.

Set those myths aside – recycling's a win-win for everyone

By: Cathy Stepp, Secretary, Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources

According to one of the myths that swirl around recycling, the contents of recycling bins don't really get recycled – they just end up in the landfill with the trash. I wish people who have heard this myth over and over again could see what the state Natural Resources Board, Department of Natural Resources staff and I saw earlier this month.

Our recent Natural Resources Board meeting took place in Germantown and included a tour of Waste Management, Inc.'s giant Material Recovery Facility or "MRF." No one who has seen this facility can have any remaining doubts about the vast quantities of paper and cardboard, plastic, metal and glass that are efficiently sorted and baled for shipment to buyers all over the United States and the world.

That's right: the plastic water bottle you drank from today might be headed to North Carolina tomorrow to be made into carpet; the cartons used to ship canned goods to your local grocery store might show up next week at a loading dock in Milwaukee, ready to be turned into cereal boxes.

Wisconsin has more than 85 MRFs and community recycling centers all over the state, sorting hundreds of thousands of tons of recyclables collected every year by local municipal crews and private hauling contractors. From humble roots just a few decades ago, today recycling has evolved into a major business sector—indeed, a growing business sector.

Companies work hard to line up steady supplies of the materials they need, and to make multi-million-dollar investments in machinery to maximize the efficiency with which recyclables are converted to new goods. Market prices for bales of recovered aluminum, plastic and paper are steady and strong.

More recycled material on the global market means lower raw material cost for U.S. companies who use recycled material, more capital to reinvest in new technology, more supply assurance for manufacturers, lower prices for consumers and – very important these days – more jobs.

Conversely, every aluminum can that gets thrown in the trash instead of being recycled increases the cost of doing business for American manufacturers that use aluminum in their production lines.

Another myth we all hear that just won't go away: "What's good for business is bad for the environment." Wrong! Recycling wins on both counts, and it goes well beyond reducing landfill space, though that's important too. Recycling aluminum saves 95 percent of the energy that would have been needed to make new aluminum from ore. One aluminum can saves enough electricity to light a 100-watt bulb for three and a half hours. It takes 60 percent less energy to recycle steel than it does to make it from raw materials. Making recycled newspaper saves 40 percent. Recycled plastics save 70 percent and recycled glass 40 percent. Saving energy also reduces air and water pollution emissions.

Sadly, too many recyclable materials still end up in landfills. It's not because haulers take them there – it's because they never get placed in a recycling bin in the first place. In 2009, for example, Wisconsin residents and businesses threw out more than $50 million worth of metal, plastic, glass and fiber. DNR staff are working with local governments and private businesses to divert more of that material to productive use, and to recover other valuable material like electronics, carpet, paint and wood.

One final myth out there is that recycling is somehow controversial. In fact, our survey results show just the opposite! The vast majority of Wisconsinites support and participate in recycling. When you and I recycle, we don't necessarily have all the benefits in mind at that moment, but I think our intuition tells us we're doing the right thing.

Recycling works for us all. While we can always improve our efforts, Wisconsinites have long valued thrift and efficiency, so it should be no surprise that recycling is part of the fabric of life here – it just makes good sense.

Leftover fall 2012 wild turkey permits go on sale August 25

MADISON – Remaining permits for the 2012 fall turkey hunting season will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis starting at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 25 and can be purchased online, in person, or by telephone.

Postcard notifications are going out this week to all customers, including conservation patrons, who were awarded a permit through the drawing process; 37,721 permits are being issued to hunters who applied by the Aug. 1 application deadline. Hunters interested in determining whether or not they drew a permit sooner can check their permit status by going to dnr.wi.us and selecting Online License Center under the Quick Tasks header.

"If you haven't been out lately during the fall turkey season, 2012 is a great time to get back out there and we've got good numbers of leftover permits available for zones 1-5," says Scott Walter, Department of Natural Resources upland ecologist. "We had a wonderful spring for production – warm and dry through the heart of the nesting and brood rearing period -- so those hunters who do get a leftover permit and go out will have a good chance to encounter birds."

Walter says that the fall turkey hunt is a chance to experience a portion of the turkey lifecycle. "There is something pretty mystical about being out in the fall turkey woods," he says.

A total of 96,700 permits were available for the fall 2012 turkey season and there were 37,721 permits issued to hunters who applied by the Aug. 1 application deadline, leaving 58,979 permits available after the drawing for over-the-counter sales.

Hunters interested in picking up leftover turkey permits should check the turkey zone map [PDF] to verify where they want to hunt and then check the leftover permit availability page to see if permits are available for the zone in which they wish to hunt.

Leftover turkey permit sales will continue until all permits are sold or the turkey season comes to an end. Hunters are limited to purchasing one leftover permit per day, although there is no limit on the total number of permits that an individual hunter can purchase.

All of the available leftover permits are for turkey management Zones 1-5; there were no leftover permits available for Zones 6 or 7 after the initial drawing. The fee for leftover turkey permits is $5 for 10- and 11-year-olds, $10 for residents, and $15 for non-residents. All permit buyers also will be required to purchase a fall turkey license and stamp unless they have previously purchased the license and stamp or are a 2012 Conservation Patron License holder. Residents and non-residents will have equal opportunity to purchase over-the-counter permits. Purchasing these permits will not affect preference point status for future spring or fall turkey permit drawings.

In addition to the Online Licensing Center, remaining fall turkey permits can be purchased through an authorized license agent, at DNR service centers (hours for service centers vary; check the DNR website for service center days and hours of operation), or by calling toll-free 1-877-LICENSE (1-877-945-4236).

Lists of open regulated rice waters are also posted and updated regularly during the harvest season. The list may be found on the wild rice page of the DNR Web site, by going to dnr.wi.gov and searching for "wild rice." The web address for the DNR's wild rice page has changed since people visited it last season. The list can also be found on the Great Lakes Indian Fish and Wildlife Commission website. People interested in lake openings and other wild rice topics may also subscribe to "Wild Rice Harvesting" updates online under the "Wildlife Management" heading. Who may harvest?

Only Wisconsin residents may harvest wild rice in the state. Harvesters age 16 to 65 must purchase and possess a wild rice harvesting license for $8.25 annually. Immediate family members (spouse and minor-age children residing in the same household as the license holder) may harvest rice under the same permit as long as the other family members have received a special wild ricing identification card.

Those buying quantities of wild rice for resale or importation as well as those processing wild rice for others or processing wild rice for sale to others also must purchase an annual wild rice buyer's license.

Allowable harvest techniques

As a traditional wild crop, rice harvesters may use only traditional harvesting equipment and techniques. Harvesters are limited to gathering wild rice in boats no longer than 17 feet and no wider than 38 inches that must be propelled by muscle power using paddles or push poles. The grain must be harvested by hand using round, wooden sticks used to bend the tall stalks over the canoe. As the seed heads are tapped, some rice falls in the canoe and some in the water to seed the bed for future years. The sticks must be smooth, rounded wooden rods or sticks no more than 38 inches long and hand-operated.

"Harvesting should be done gently, so beds can be harvested again as more rice matures; using a good ricing technique ensures the wild rice stands aren't damaged," says Fleener.

To further protect the fragile rice beds and to allow waterfowl an undisturbed period to feed, rickers can collect wild rice only during the day from 10 a.m. until sunset.

Cottage industries have developed over the years in communities adjoining the traditionally productive wild rice waters to process the freshly harvested wild rice and prepare it for cooking. Processing involves parching the grain to reduce its moisture content, and removing the sheath that encloses the grain. Moisture and the sheath often compose more than 60 percent of the harvest weight, leaving about four pounds of finished rice for every 10 pounds harvested.

The wild rice season typically runs from late August through mid-September. Wild rice ripens at a gradual rate as the milky starch fills the rice heads and hardens during maturation. At any given location, rice is typically harvested over a two- to three-week period.

Wild rice waters where seasons are date-regulated can be found on the DNR website. FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT: Jason Fleener, 608-266-7408

Wild rice gatherers will have to hunt for good rice beds this year

MADISON – As fall approaches, people who participate in the ageless annual harvest of wild rice or “manoomin” are readying canoes, paddles and baskets. Wild rice is typically found in northern Wisconsin in shallow portions of lakes, river beds, flowages and gently flowing waters.

The Great Lakes Indian Fish and Wildlife Commission annually assesses the wild rice crop using aerial surveys and says rice pickers are going to have to hunt for good rice beds this year.

“Wild rice abundance is influenced by a number of factors, which vary in effect from year to year,” says Peter David, wildlife biologist for the Great Lakes Indian Fish and Wildlife Commission in Odanah. “An early, warm spring allowed for early germination, but heavy rain events appear to have had negative impacts at some sites. In addition, the broad distribution of poor beds suggests other factors may be involved as well. This year seems to fit the pattern that has been observed anecdotally of poor crops following mild winters.”

While a few scattered beds look pretty good, the overall crop looks quite poor, especially in northwest Wisconsin, David says. “Interestingly, beds in east-central Minnesota are in even worse shape; rice pickers and waterfowl alike are going to have to hunt for good beds this year.”

Rice crops on individual sites may also be harmed by high water levels due to deliberate water level manipulation or by beaver dams.

“Wild rice harvests can vary widely from year to year and from site to site,” said Jason Fleener, Wisconsin’s assistant wetland habitat specialist. “Rice gatherers are encouraged to inspect the waters they are interested in early to see if there will be appreciable harvest opportunities when rice is ripe.”

Fleener says that ricers may also want to speak with local ricers, tribal officials, or DNR biologists to get a perspective on good rice waters for the season.

“For most people, however, just the ritual of rice collecting on Wisconsin’s beautiful fall waters is worth the time and feeds the soul,” he says.

Most rice waters across the state have public access sites for launching canoes. However, in some cases ricers may need to request permission from private land owners to access certain sites.

The wild rice resource

Not only is wild rice culturally significant to Native American people and others, it is an important food source for migrating waterfowl and other migratory birds. Fleener noted that it is critical for private land owners, boaters and anglers to know how to identify wild rice and how to protect it from destruction. “It is also important that ricers harvest rice responsibly to ensure the sustainability of the resource,” he says.

Wild rice is the seed of a family of aquatic grasses (including Zizania palustris and Zizania aquatica). The rice kernels are nutritious, delicious food for wildlife and people. The grain grows on tall stalks in shallow lakes, streams and riverbeds throughout the upper Midwest and southern Canada. Seeds imbedded in lake bottoms for a year or more start to germinate in early spring and send a stem up to the surface of the water. Given suitable water conditions, the rice plants grow into thick beds from June through September. The seed heads normally start to fill out in mid to late August and mature over a 10- to 14-day period.

“However, in 2012 we may see a slightly earlier maturation of those beds that did survive the storms and high water this late spring and early summer,” says Fleener.

Wild rice harvest is partly regulated in Wisconsin

In Wisconsin, most of the harvest comes from the northwestern part of the state in Burnett, Washburn and Polk counties and in Vilas, Oneida and Forest counties in north-central Wisconsin. Additional beds are managed on waters on tribal lands.

On most rivers, flowages and some lakes, no formal seasons are established, and these can be harvested whenever ricers determine the rice is ripe, provided they find ripe rice before the ducks, songbirds and mammals that also crave the calorie-rich grains.

On some lakes, however, the season is date-regulated, and wild rice may only be harvested during the open season set cooperatively by DNR staff and tribal rice chiefs.

Notice of season openings and closings are posted at lake landings and at common lake access points at least 24 hours in advance of season openings.

State and tribal authorities inspect the rice beds every two to three days on larger waters that typically have rice beds and are frequented by more harvesters. Smaller beds are inspected less frequently. Wild rice harvesters can find out when regulated waters are open for rice harvest in northwestern Wisconsin by calling the DNR Spooner Service Center at (715) 635-2101 and in north central Wisconsin waters by calling the DNR Woodruff Service Center at (715) 356-5211.

Grammy Award-winner Bill Miller to perform at Nicolet College

Nicolet College's Creative Arts Series begins its 2012-13 season in September with a live concert by singer-songwriter and flutist Bill "Bird Song" Miller, one of the most accomplished and revered artists of Native American music. Miller will perform in the Nicolet Theatre on Sat., Sept. 8, at 7:30 p.m.

Winner of the 2005 Grammy award for Best Native American Recording, Miller has produced a number of landmark albums, including Loon, Mountain and Moon, The Red Road, Reservation Road Live, Raven in the Snow, Ghostdance and The Art of Survival. In more recent years he produced two albums, Spirit Rain and Cedar Dream Songs, acclaimed for their sensitive blending of Native American and western folk/blues traditions into an entirely new sound.

For the past four years, Miller has been working on his long-anticipated album, Chronicles of Hope, now available on iTunes. Chronicles continues Miller's passion for incorporating other American folk music traditions into his songs and his passion for deeply honest, moving stories of contemporary Native American life.

A gifted storyteller, Miller's concert will showcase the songs and stories of his more recent work, as well as his ethereal flute playing, which earned him the Indian name of Fush-Ya Heay Ka, meaning Bird Song.

"Bill Miller is one of the truly great performers of the folk music world," said Nicolet Theatre Director Jim Nuttall. "He's written songs for many of our top artists - Nancy Griffith, Peter Rowan, Kim Carnes, just to mention a few, and he's shared the stage with just about everyone from Arlo Guthrie to Richie Havens to Pearl Jam's Eddie Vedder. Bill's last concert here was a sell-out. We're excited to have him back."

Tickets for the Bill Miller concert are $15 and can be purchased in advance online by visiting nicoletlive.com, or calling the box office at (715) 365-4646.

Grains: The Whole Truth

Whole grains are packed with vitamins, minerals, fiber and other health-protecting nutrients. For good health, experts recommend you make half your grains whole. Eat at least 3 servings (about 48 grams) of whole grains per day. Look closer at these delicious choices:

1. Oats aren't just for breakfast. Try: bread with added whole-grain oats, muffins baked with whole-grain oat flour or oat risotto as a side dish. you can also replace wheat flour in a recipe with oat flour.

2. Brown rice is more nutritious than white. Try: brown rice in stir-fry, in a casserole or as stuffing for baked peppers or tomatoes.

3. Spelt is a type of wheat. It comes in refined and whole-grain versions. Try: whole-grain spelt pasta or crackers. Note: If the package doesn't say whole grain, it probably isn't.

4. Quinoa (pronounced KEEN-wa) is an ancient grain with a nutty flavor and a chewy texture. Try: quinoa instead of rice as a side dish or in pilafs.

5. Corn is an age-old staple. Try: whole-grain cornbread or air-popped popcorn (minus the butter and salt).

What's in a name? When shopping, look for the word whole as the first item on the ingredient list, or for the words 100% whole grain on the product label. Terms such as brown, nine-grain, mixed grain and multi-grain don't guarantee the product is whole-grain.

Tip: Look for the yellow Whole Grain Stamp on the package.

Take The Stress Out Of Your Commute

Whether you carpool, drive or take public transportation, use these ideas to make your commute less stressful and more productive.

Maximize downtime. If you aren't the driver, use commute time to enjoy podcasts or an audio book.

Make the break. Use your commute to transition successfully between work and home. As you travel, imagine leaving work behind, and visualize the first thing you'll do when you arrive home. In the morning, mentally rehearse the day ahead.

Leave extra time. Get up 15 minutes earlier. You'll rush less and feel less pressured. Plus, arriving at work early will give you a jump on the day.

Change your route. If your commute makes you tense, choose a less stressful route. Even if it's a bit longer, the relief might make it worth a few extra minutes.

Bottom line: Make good use of your commute; you control it before it controls you.
