National Library Week Open House, Crandon

The Crandon Public Library is joining hundreds of public libraries around the country in celebrating National Library Week 2013. This year's theme is "Communities Matter @ Your Library" and we are reinforcing that philosophy by offering opportunities for our community members to stop in and learn about what the Crandon Public Library has to offer. (If you haven't been to the library lately, you are overdue for a visit! (All events are free with no registration required!)

Saturday morning, April 20th beginning at 10:30 a.m. the Crandon Public Library will host an Open House with a variety of events for all members of the community.

Families can learn about how one of their favorite foods is closely connected to the garden as we plant a community Pizza garden. The first 25 families to attend the program will also be able to take home a plant to grow and enjoy. We will provide the seeds, soils and the pots. This program will be presented by Jill Krueger, Forest county Health Department, and Gail Spaniol, Forest County UW-Extension Agent.

Laurel Peterson and her dog Sam, members of the Tail Waggin' Tutors organization, will also be here to offer individual reading opportunities to youngsters beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Lego League will also be held on Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. Lego League is for children of all ages and their families. Participants are invited to use their imaginations and build creative projects using LEGO and DUPLO® blocks! We provide the Legos, you provide the fun!

Also, join local historian R.T. Krueger for "Revolutionary

Tired of winter? You can bet this fox is tired of scrounging a living with his nose in the snow looking for a mouse for dinner. It makes you glad you aren't a fox, or a mouse for that matter. But, like all things in nature, spring will come when it comes, and not before. There were geese on open water in some of the rivers, and when in Green Bay a week ago, the fields were covered with geese. Spring is inching its way north. Antigo has far less snow than Forest County and the surrounding area, so warm weather must be just around the corner!

Northwoods Immunization Coalition Celebrates National Infant Immunization Awareness Week April 20-27

National Infant Immunization Week (NIIW) is an annual observance that brings to light the importance of protecting infants from vaccine-preventable diseases and to celebrate the achievements of the immunization programs in promoting healthy communities throughout the United States.

Vaccines are among the most successful and cost-effective public health tools available for preventing disease and death. They not only help protect vaccinated individuals but also help protect entire communities by preventing and reducing the spread of infectious diseases.

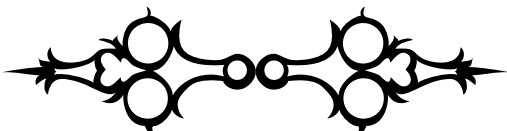

Immunization is a shared responsibility. Families, healthcare professionals, school nurses, and public health officials must work together to help protect the entire community. Local healthcare providers and health departments have teamed up together as the Northwoods Immunization Coalition to address local immunization rates, professional educational opportunities, local supply and community access to vaccines.

Vaccinations are safe and have been proven to prevent serious diseases. Giving babies the recommended immunization by age two is the best way to protect them from serious childhood diseases. Parents are encouraged to talk to their healthcare provider to assure their child is up-to-date on immunizations.

Because of the success of vaccines in preventing diseases, parents may not have heard of some of today's vaccines or the serious diseases they prevent. These diseases can be especially serious for infants and young children. That is why it is important to follow the recommended immunization schedule to protect infants and children by providing immunity early in life, before they are exposed to potentially life-threatening diseases.

Vaccine preventable diseases still circulate in the United States and around the world, so continued vaccination is necessary to protect everyone from potential outbreaks. One example of the seriousness of vaccine-preventable diseases is the increase in whooping cough (pertussis) cases or outbreaks that have been reported in a majority of states during 2012. Today, there are cases in every state, and the country is on track to have the most reported cases since 1959. As of November 16, 2012, more than 35,000 cases have been reported across the United States, including 16 deaths. The majority of these deaths were among infants younger than 3 months of age.

Local health departments offer vaccinations through the Vaccine for Children program which are available at no charge to eligible children. Contact your healthcare provider or local health department to see if your child is up to date.

Chocolate

Chocolate is a raw or processed food produced from the seed of the tropical Theobroma cacao tree. Cacao has been cultivated for at least three millennia in Mexico, Central America and Northern South America. Its earliest documented use is around 1100 BC. The majority of the Mesoamerican people made chocolate beverages, including the Aztecs, who made it into a beverage known as xocolatl, a Nahuatl word meaning "bitter water". The seeds of the cacao tree have an intense bitter taste, and must be fermented to develop the flavor.

After fermentation, the beans are dried, then cleaned, and then roasted, and the shell is removed to produce cacao nibs. The nibs are then ground to cocoa mass, pure chocolate in rough form. Because this cocoa mass usually is liquefied then molded with or without other ingredients, it is called chocolate liquor. The liquor also may be processed into two components: cocoa solids and cocoa butter. Unsweetened baking chocolate (bitter chocolate) contains primarily cocoa solids and cocoa butter in varying proportions. Much of the chocolate consumed today is in the form of sweet chocolate, combining cocoa solids, cocoa butter or other fat, and sugar. Milk chocolate is sweet chocolate that additionally contains milk powder or condensed milk. White chocolate contains cocoa butter, sugar, and milk but no cocoa solids.

Cocoa solids contain alkaloids such as theobromine and phenethylamine, which have physiological effects on the body. It has been linked to serotonin levels in the brain. Some research found that chocolate, eaten in moderation, can lower blood pressure.[1] The presence of theobromine renders chocolate toxic to some animals,[2] especially dogs and cats.

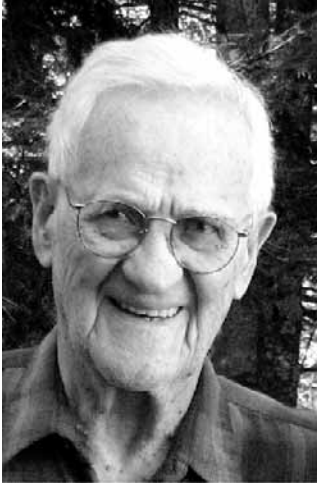

Chocolate has become one of the most popular food types and flavors in the world. Chocolate chip cookies have become very common, and very popular, in most parts of Europe and North America. Gifts of chocolate molded into different shapes have become traditional on certain holidays. Chocolate is also used in cold and hot beverages, to produce chocolate milk and hot chocolate.

Cocoa mass was used originally in Mesoamerica both as a beverage and as an ingredient in foods. Chocolate played a special role in both Maya and Aztec royal and religious events. Priests presented cacao seeds as offerings to the deities and served chocolate drinks during sacred ceremonies. All of the areas that were conquered by the Aztecs that grew cacao beans were ordered to pay them as a tax, or as the Aztecs called it, a "tribute".[3]

The Europeans sweetened and fattened it by adding refined sugar and milk, two ingredients unknown to the Mexicans. By contrast, the Europeans never infused it into their general diet, but have compartmentalized its use to sweets and desserts. In the 19th century, Briton John Cadbury developed an emulsification process to make solid chocolate, creating the modern chocolate bar. Although cocoa is originally from the Americas, today Western Africa produces almost two-thirds of the world's cocoa, with Côte d'Ivoire growing almost half of it.

Born wild: Babies best left in nature

MADISON -- With the arrival of spring so, too, will be the arrival of baby wildlife. Well-intentioned animal enthusiasts may mistakenly assume some wildlife babies are abandoned and in need of their help without realizing the babies' mothers most likely are nearby and on the job.

Department of Natural Resources wildlife biologists remind outdoor enthusiasts that these wildlife babies are best left in their natural homes and near their mothers, which are likely hiding from sight in an effort to protect their babies.

"Wildlife animal mothers protect, conceal and feed their babies in ways that may be easily misinterpreted by humans who want to help the animal baby that appears vulnerable," said Amanda Cyr, a DNR wildlife biologist. "Unlike humans one way they protect their babies is to conceal them and leave them hidden from predators under natural vegetation."

Cyr says the mother returns to feed the babies, but often under the cover of darkness or brush. This is something humans may not understand because it is so removed from what a human mother does. The well-intended but uninformed person may attempt to rescue or feed a wild animal baby because, in the human world, we perceive the baby as being afraid, alone and abandoned.

"It often is not. Its mother is following natural behavior instincts to help the babies survive and thrive," Cyr said. "Human interventions, while done with good intentions, instead can damage the health and well-being of the baby animal."

Cyr says feeding a wild animal with human foods can cause more damage to the wild animal because their digestive systems are different. Wild animals require different foods and nutrient levels that cannot be met with human diets. Too much human or domestic animal disturbance or activity near a baby animal could also cause the mother to shy away from the area. Especially keep a close watch on pets when they are outdoors so they don't disturb a nest of baby animals.

Born without body scents for a reason; fawn's spots for survival
 Some wild animals are born with little body scent. Their protection from predators, Cyr says, is for them to remain motionless and concealed within the environment.

"Their mothers are keeping watch from afar," Cyr said. "The mother returns a couple of times each day to quickly feed the babies. After feeding, the mother will quickly hide them again from the predators."

Cyr says this is the natural behavior of white-tailed deer and fawns. "Fawns have little scent to attract a predator and their spots help them blend in to the environment," she says. "They move very little in their first weeks while they are alone in a place the mother selected. If you see a fawn lying on the ground by itself, you should leave the fawn where it is and not disrupt the area."

Baby rabbits also are usually alone in their nest during the day when the mother is not there. The baby rabbit's best protection from predators is to remain in their nest which is concealed with grass or vegetation.

"The mother will come back to the nest a couple of times each day to feed the babies," Cyr said.

If you find a baby wild animal, Cyr says the best policy is to leave them alone. "A good option to really help the animal is to call the DNR Call Center (1-888-936-7463, 1-888-WDNRINFO). We can evaluate the situation and determine if you should be connected with a wildlife rehabilitator in your area."

Fighting Back Against Allergy Season

How to arm yourself better to breathe easier:

Spring allergy seasons continue to start earlier each year (it was February in 2012), and pollen counts continue to go up. It's not a fluke; scientists say the effects of climate change are making allergy seasons worse. Research presented at the American College of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology in November 2012 suggests that by 2040, pollen counts are expected to double. "I do think that the allergy seasons seem to be longer. When winter is shorter and less severe, it means there will be pollens and molds present for a longer period of time," says Dr. Stacey Gray, an allergy expert at the Harvard-affiliated Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

The offenders:

Grass, weeds, and trees release tiny pollens into the air each spring, summer and fall. Inhaling these pollens can trigger a reaction of the immune system. It's known as hay fever. Symptoms vary, but commonly include a runny nose, sneezing, itching, and burning or watery eyes. If you have asthma or chronic obstructive lung disease, pollen can increase your risk for flareups. Other floating pollutants in the air can cause allergic reactions as well, such as mold spores and dust mite droppings, although mites aren't a seasonal problem, and mold can be a year-round problem in warm climates.

You can find out what you are allergic to by having allergy testing. This is done in a doctor's office, using either a blood test or a skin test. The skin test involves pricking the surface of the skin and exposing it to allergens. Redness and swelling at a test spot on the skin indicates an allergic reaction.

The medical fix:

Once you know which allergen you're dealing with, you can develop a treatment strategy with your doctor. This usually involves medications. Which drugs your doctor prescribes depends on a number of factors, such as the symptoms you're having, and the medications you're taking for other conditions because of possible interactions.

Antihistamines counteract a protein called histamine, which is released by tissue cells deep inside the skin during an allergic reaction. Over the counter (OTC) examples are chlorpheniramine (Chlor-Trimeton) and diphenhydramine (Benadryl). "Antihistamines like Benadryl are an old stand-by, but there are several newer non-prescription medications that work well without causing drowsiness, which is one of the main side effects of Benadryl," says Dr. Gray. These include fexofenadine (Allegra), loratidine (Claritin), and cetirizine (Zyrtec). Cetirizine can sometimes still cause some drowsiness for some patients. By prescription, there are now topical nasal antihistamine sprays—azelastine (Astellin) and olopatadine (Patanase)—which can help with sneezing and runny nose. There are also topical antihistamine eyedrops that can be used for the symptoms of watery eyes, such as ketotifen (Zaditor), available OTC, and olopatadine (Patanol), available by prescription.

Corticosteroid nasal sprays are steroids similar to hormones your adrenal glands produce. They reduce inflammation and help reduce nasal congestion, runny nose and nasal itching. These are available by prescription, such as mometasone furoate (Nasonex) and fluticasone propionate (Flonase), and can be used long term.

Non-steroidal nasal sprays that contain cromolyn sodium (NasalCrom) are available OTC. These target the root cause of symptoms by keeping allergens from reaching cells that release histamine. They can be used long term. However, Dr. Gray says the sprays are often not quite as effective as nasal steroid sprays.

Decongestants help by reducing swelling in the nasal passages, but they can cause problems for people with high blood pressure or heart problems, and in general should not be used long term, points out Dr. Gray. Decongestants are also available in sprays, but they should not be used for more than a few days, since they can actually make congestion worse when used long-term. Decongestants are available without a prescription, such as pseudoephedrine (Sudafed), but are kept behind the counter because some people use them to make illegal methamphetamines.

Immunotherapy is a series of allergy shots that help build up immunity over a period of 3-5 years. This is usually a last resort for people who don't respond to medications.

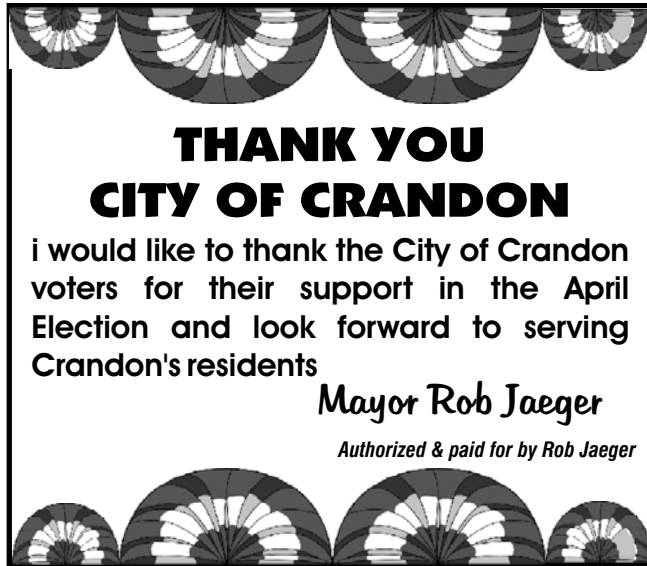

Since allergy seasons appear to be worsening, Dr. Gray suggests starting medications early, before the allergy season starts. "For instance, start using a nasal steroid spray a few weeks before the spring allergies begin," says Dr. Gray.

Other strategies:

Fighting allergies with medicine alone may not be enough, says Dr. Gray. She recommends minimizing allergens in the house and in the work environment. "Make sure the air conditioning and heating filters and vents are all clean."

During peak pollen season, close your windows and consider wearing a mask for outdoor yard duties. Better yet, avoid going outside when pollen levels are highest. Dr. Gray also recommends using nasal saline irrigations. "They're especially helpful to clean the nose after an exposure to an allergen like working in the yard."

Remember, too, that certain irritants in the environment can make allergy symptoms worse, like exposure to cigarette smoke and pollution. Dr. Gray suggests avoiding such exposure if possible.

Kathleen Atkinson named Eastern Regional Forester

MILWAUKEE, Wisconsin (April 15, 2013) Kathleen Atkinson is the Eastern Region's new regional forester. She replaces Charles L. Myers, who retired in September 2012.

Atkinson comes to the Regional Office from the Forest Service's national headquarters in Washington, D.C. where she has served as associate deputy chief for business operations since June 2011. Prior to this, she was the Agency's director of strategic planning, budget and accountability. Her 30-year Forest Service career has encompassed a variety of positions and geographical locations.

"I am honored to be the next regional forester for the Eastern Region. The diversity of the Region, both in its forests and people, make it a beautiful and inviting place to work. I look forward to this opportunity," stated Atkinson.

Atkinson began her Forest Service career as a seasonal employee in Wyoming. She has held several line officer positions, including forest supervisor for the Chattahoochee-Oconee National Forest (Georgia), deputy forest supervisor for the National Forests in Florida, and district ranger on Louisiana's Kisatchie National Forest. Before this she was a recreation planner on the Kaibab National Forest (Arizona), a timber management assistant on the Ocala National Forest in Florida, and a silviculturalist on the Black Hills National Forest in South Dakota.

Atkinson grew up on a farm in southwestern Michigan. She holds a bachelor's degree in forestry from the University of Michigan, and a master's in public administration from the University of South Dakota. She enjoys horseback riding, bicycling and art.

Her effective date was February 10 and her reporting date is April 14.

Wabeno Students Honored at Lions' Banquet

Fourteen Wabeno High School students were honored by the Wabeno Lions Club at its 38th Annual Student Honors Banquet on Monday, April 8, at The Springs. Each year, the Lions ask teachers from Wabeno High School to select a student that can be called outstanding in that teacher's particular field of study. They are the students of whom teachers can say "This is the student that I can point to as an example for other students in my class to follow." The students and their teachers are then invited to be guests at a banquet at which the teachers talk briefly about the students and then present them with award certificates designed by the Lions Club. Parents/guardians; other faculty, school staff, administration, and school board members; a guest speaker; and Lions Club members also attend.

This year's honored students were seniors Megan and Miranda Tarlton (daughters of Timothy and Marilyn Tarlton) in girls physical education, senior Andrew Sheppard (son of Frank and Lorrie Shepard) in boys physical education, senior Brandon Oberleitner (son of Scott Oberleitner) in technology education, senior LeiVaughna Aaron (daughter of Donnie Renard) in English, junior Miranda Vogel (daughter of Ted and Renee Gust) in chemistry, senior Kacy Piontek (daughter of Greg and Debbie Piontek) in life science, freshman Alexis Christianson (daughter of Jacob and Sherry Christianson) in art, seniors Stone Koenig (son of Tom Kroll and JoAnn Koenig) and Robert Rocolle (son of Mike and Michele Rocolle) in social studies, senior Stephanie Prasser (daughter of Bob and Cheri Prasser) in foreign language, senior Hali Nygard (daughter of Chuck and Bonnie Nygard) in mathematics, senior Jake Pakulski (son of Pat and Tiffany Pakulski) in business education, and senior Alyssa Mangold (daughter of Ken and Lisa Mangold) in vocal music.

In addition to an excellent meal, the students and guest were treated to an inspirational presentation by guest speaker Val VanEperen Hoffmann a 1992 graduate of Wabeno High School. Val was a Lions Honor Student in 1991. As a high school, she was active in sports and extra curricular activities. She is married to Troy Hoffmann, and they have three children who also attend Wabeno Elementary and High School. She graduated from Nicolet Area Technical College in 2004 with an Associates Degree in Nursing and is currently working on her Bachelors Degree in Nursing through the University of Wisconsin Green Bay. She is employed at NuRoc Community Healthcare as the Director of Nursing and has been there since 2007. Val enjoys spending time with her family, camping, gardening, and their many pets.

Val talked to the students about the fact that what she saw as her goal when she graduated from high school was not what she ending up pursuing. The students should not be afraid if their circumstances change and they find themselves unable to meet the goals they originally set. The key to success is to keep setting new goals, working hard, and with the support of family, friends and community you can succeed.

In addition to the Wabeno High School Honors Banquet, future Wabeno Lions sponsored events include a dinner for local senior citizens on April 26 and the Wabeno High School Senior Banquet on May 15. The Lions will also select high school students to receive scholarships and service awards. The Wabeno Lions, whose motto is "We Serve," also financially support many other school and community activities. Those interested in becoming part of the Wabeno Lions Club should contact any member.

Think Fit, Be Fit

Fitness goes beyond physical activity. It is also about attitude and self-esteem. People who are committed to becoming physically fit increase their self-confidence, which encourages them to continue their efforts.

Even people who have hectic work schedules and overwhelming personal obligations manage to fit in regular exercise - despite weather, daycare, lack of time and other barriers.

7 Traits Successful Exercisers Share:

- They love feeling fit. Regular exercise imparts many positive results - the ability to cope with stress, sounder sleep and most important, the strength and energy to enjoy life.
- They don't make excuses. Rather than always look for a way out, they avoid dwelling on the when, where or how of exercising and just do it.
- They make time. Some people need to plan ahead or develop a set routine to stay on track. For others, the need to exercise is ingrained and they automatically seek opportunities for it every day.
- They find activities they enjoy. Whether it be walking, weight lifting, golf or gardening, physical activity becomes a regular and pleasurable part of their lives.
- They don't feel guilty if they miss a workout. They behave in consistently healthy ways but accept that sometimes things (work, family, travel or fatigue) will interfere with their fitness activities.
- They set realistic goals. These can be as a daily walk around the block or as ambitions as jogging 15 miles a week. They make personal choices based on health, age, time and other variables.
- They view physical fitness as a long-term pursuit. In addition to feeling energized today, they want to be strong decades from now. For them, fitness is about good health for life.

High Blood Pressure And Cholesterol

The number one killer in America is heart disease. And, two huge health risks that can lead to serious heart conditions are high blood pressure and high cholesterol. But, these can be prevented.

Let's start with high cholesterol. The American Heart Association says that one in five Americans have too high a cholesterol level. But first, just what is cholesterol? Cholesterol is a waxy, fat-like substance called a lipid that is found inside cells and blood. It is produced naturally in the liver, but some of the "bad" cholesterol comes from the food we eat, mainly in animal fats. While too much cholesterol can be harmful, a certain amount is necessary for bodily functions, such as making cell walls and acting as a building block to produce various hormones, bile acids, and Vitamin D.

Having too much cholesterol can block blood flow, resulting in a thickening and hardening of artery walls, a disorder called arteriosclerosis. Since this also narrows the arteries, blood flow can be slowed down, or even blocked. With less blood, the heart therefore gets less oxygen. That can result in chest pain, heart attack, or something as drastic as death. Lowering your blood cholesterol level is one of the best ways you can decrease your risk of heart disease. And, even if your cholesterol is close to the desirable range, 200 milligrams per deciliter of blood, you can lower it and reduce your risk of heart disease.

With all this thickening going on, water can play a very important role. Drinking water can actually thin the blood, making in a natural way to help the blood pump more smoothly. When the body is dehydrated, the blood becomes acidic which can lead to a build-up in LDL levels of cholesterol. Drinking plenty of water will keep your blood ways clean and eliminate excess buildup of cholesterol waste from the body. Drinking plenty of water will keep your blood ways clean! Since exercise, along with a healthy diet, is an important contribution to the lowering of cholesterol, once again, water needs to be drank in order to replenish what was lost. In fact, consumption of water so you are fully hydrated can increase your metabolic rate!

Let's move on to high blood pressure, also known as hypertension. Blood pressure refers to the force of blood pushing against artery walls as it makes its way through the body. Just like air in a tire, blood fills arteries to a certain capacity, and anything over that capacity can have damaging effects. (Ever have too much pressure in your tires?) Just like high cholesterol, high blood pressure can threaten healthy arteries and lead to life-threatening conditions such as heart disease and stroke. And what's scary is that there are not any real symptoms until, which is why high blood pressure is known as the silent killer.

Hypertension can be combated in many ways, such as quitting smoking, drinking alcohol or overweight. Water can also help lower this pressure, as blood is mainly comprised of water. Excessive salt consumption can adversely affect blood pressure, but luckily sodium can be flushed out of the body by drinking clean purified water daily. So, drinking a healthy amount of water each day can maintain a healthy heart but what happens if we don't drink enough water? Dehydration will definitely affect your blood pressure adversely. Our kidneys clean our blood. When we are dehydrated and have high blood pressure, the blood flow to our kidneys is reduced which makes our bodies think they are low on water. They will thus react by telling the brain to constrict veins and arteries, which will make the blood pressure even higher.

The quality of the drinking water can also have an effect on our cholesterol levels. Animal studies have shown that chlorine in drinking water can raise levels of plasma cholesterol. This is something we must be aware of because most tap water in the US is chlorinated. Therefore, it is a good idea to install a quality water filtration system that can remove chlorine and other harmful chemicals from your drinking water.

Heart disease is a serious issue in America today, with two of the top causes being high cholesterol and high blood pressure. Drinking plenty of clean water can help combat both of these. Remember it is also never too late to improve your heart health with the help of regular exercise, balanced nutrition and a positive outlook on life. The human body is very resilient and if you treat yourself well, you will be surprised by your body's own natural ability to heal itself and lower bad cholesterol. Here's drinking to your health and achieving your goals. We know you can do it!

To get the name of a wildlife rehabilitator in your area, you can contact the WDNR's Call Center (1-888-WDNRINFO / 936-7463) or Bureau of Wildlife Management (608-266-8204), or search for "wildlife rehabilitator directory" on the DNR website.

"Animals tend to be on the move during specific times during the day and the hours around dusk and dawn are especially busy," Cyr said. When driving in more rural or woods areas slow down and watch for animals on the move. Just like humans, animals start getting more active when the weather makes a transition into the warmer temperatures.

What is the law on assisting wildlife?

State and federal laws prohibit the possession of live native wild animals without a license or permit from the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources or the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. A permit from the USFWS is required to possess all native birds protected under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act. A few species are allowed to be possessed without a license, but the take of these species must be from a legal source.

If it is absolutely necessary to help a young animal that is injured or its mother has been killed, a person may legally have the animal in their possession for up to 24 hours for the purpose of transporting the animal to a licensed wildlife rehabilitator.

People can learn more about assisting wildlife by searching the DNR website for "orphaned wildlife".

Hungry Deer

The photos above are of a hungry deer that was pruning a cedar tree on the Roy and Mary Lu Lewis property on Rollingstone Lake.

This winter has been a long one for many of the animals, and for sure this deer is longing for green grass. During deep snow winters that persist for months, many deer die from starvation, and loggers will tell you that they are in constant sight on a logging job during those rough times, often eating buds or boughs off of the tree being sawn up.

From the Net

Too old for technology!

When I bought my Blackberry, I thought about the 30-year business I ran with 1800 employees, all without a cell phone that plays music, takes videos, pictures and communicates with Facebook and Twitter. I signed up under duress for Twitter and Facebook, so my seven kids, their spouses, my 13 grand kids and two great grandkids could communicate with me in the modern way. I figured I could handle something as simple as Twitter with only 140 characters of space.

My phone was beeping every three minutes with the details of everything except the bowel movements of the entire next generation. I am not ready to live like this. I keep my cell phone in the garage in my golf bag.

The kids bought me a GPS for my last birthday because they say I get lost every now and then going over to the grocery store or library. I keep that in a box under my tool bench with the Blue tooth [it's red] phone I am supposed to use when I drive. I wore it once and was standing in line at Barnes and Noble talking to my wife and everyone in the nearest 50 yards was glaring at me. I had to take my hearing aid out to use it, and I got a little loud.

I mean the GPS looked pretty smart on my dash board, but the lady inside that gadget was the most annoying, rudest person I had run into in a long time. Every 10 minutes, she would sarcastically say, "Re-calc-u-lating." You would think that she could be nicer. It was like she could barely tolerate me. She would let go with a deep sigh and then tell me to make a U-turn at the next light. Then if I made a right turn instead. Well, it was not a good relationship...

When I get really lost now, I call my wife and tell her the name of the cross streets and while she is starting to develop the same tone as Gypsy, the GPS lady, at least she loves me.

To be perfectly frank , I am still trying to learn how to use the cordless phones in our house. We have had them for four years, but I still haven't figured out how I lose three phones all at once and have to run around digging under chair cushions, checking bathrooms, and the dirty laundry baskets when the phone rings.

The world is just getting too complex for me. They even mess me up every time I go to the grocery store. You would think they could settle on something themselves but this sudden "Paper or Plastic?" every time I check out just knocks me for a loop. I bought some of those cloth reusable bags to avoid looking confused , but I never remember to take them with me.

Now I toss it back to them. When they ask me, "Paper or plastic?" I just say, "Doesn't matter to me. I am bi-sacksual." Then it's their turn to stare at me with a blank look. I was recently asked if I tweet. I answered , No, but I do fart a lot."

Tips for Cleaning Windows

Windows, windows, windows, everywhere you look there are windows. Windows may appear to be clean but when the sun shines on them we get the true picture. Every little smudge, finger print or nose print shows. Window cleaning is a large task but can be simplified by using techniques and equipment made for doing windows.

A professional brass or stainless steel squeegee, available at janitorial supply stores is a helpful tool. Use a window cleaning solution, which contains ammonia, vinegar and/or a liquid dishwashing detergent. These work well if used sparingly. You may purchase these products or make them yourself. Too much chemical or soap solution causes streaks and leaves residue on the windows. Ammonia cuts heavy greasy soil and vinegar helps remove hard water spots.

Techniques for Cleaning Windows:

Wipe very dirty windows with a damp cloth. Don't rub dirt because it will scratch the glass. A vacuum cleaner with an attachment will work for this job, too. With a clean sponge or cloth lightly wet the window. Don't flood it! When using a squeegee, tilt at an angle to the glass, so only about one-inch of the rubber blade presses lightly against the top of the window glass. This will leave a dry area across the top of the window and stop drips from running down on your clean window. Wipe the blade of the squeegee with a damp cloth each time. A dry blade on dry glass will skip. Next place the squeegee horizontally in the dry area and pull down, lapping over the dry clean area each time. Continue until you have finished the window. Finish by wiping off the window sill. Windows can be cleaning from either side or from the top using this technique.

You may use a cloth or paper to clean also, use overlapping strokes so you cover all the window and don't miss spots.

Helpful Hints:

- Don't clean windows in direct sunlight – the window may dry too fast and streak.
- Exterior windows should first be washed with a hose or clean water to remove grease and grime.
- Wash windows side to side on the inside and up to down on the outside. If there are streaks, you will know which side they are on.
- Change wash and rinse waters often.
- Vacuum screen to remove dust, etc
- Outside screens can be scrubbed with warm water and rinsed with clean water. Allow to air dry.
- Squeegees do not work on textured or stained glass windows.

Choose a "hard" paper towel (soft ones leave lint) or cotton cloths such as old t-shirt or socks. The new micro-fiber cloths work well for cleaning windows. Follow the instructions for use of the cloths. When washing micro-fiber cloths or towels do not use fabric softener as it reduces the absorbency.

Homemade Cleaners for Windows:

- Mix two tablespoons of ammonia OR white vinegar with two quarts or warm water.
- Mix one-half cup ammonia, one pint of 70 percent rubbing alcohol and one teaspoon of liquid dishwashing detergent. Add enough water to make one gallon liquid.
- Mix one tablespoon liquid dishwashing detergent with one quart water.

Choose a time when you feel good and energetic to do windows, you will feel better and the job will go faster. <http://lancaster.unl.edu/home/articles/2003/windowcleaning.shtml>
